Summary Paragraph

Walnut Hill is a large residential neighborhood geographically located near the center of Petersburg, Virginia. It was first subdivided in 1910 by the Walnut Hill Corporation after acquisition of a nearly 250-acre farm, at one time called Walnut Hill. The community's first expansion occurred just a few years following its initial establishment and now the district encompasses 280 acres. The district is characterized by ordered streets that follow a northwest-southeast arrangement, most of which are named after large pre-Civil War Virginia plantations. The neighborhood was planned as a new residential community that catered to the wealthy of Petersburg with deed covenants for the lots on Westover Avenue that demanded higher value construction compared to the rest of the neighborhood. The first lots in the neighborhood thus were built upon primarily by wealthy, white, Petersburg citizens. The physical and social center of the community was deliberately focused on Westover Avenue and South Sycamore Street and the residents along these streets were predominately those of the middle-to upper-class who were local business leaders, industrialists, lawyers, doctors, politicians, and proprietors. The remainder of the neighborhood was inhabited by middle-class, white residents representing the average white population of the city with dwellings primarily of the 1910s and 1920s encompassing generally Colonial Revival and Craftsman-style examples. During the Great Depression and after World War II ended, additional construction within the neighborhood continued, while styles and construction methods evolved due to economic conditions, technological advances, and changing demographics. Minimal Traditional and Ranch houses are representative of these trends. The neighborhood largely was built out by the early 1970s, although a few examples of infill construction up to the early 21st century have been identified. Overall, there are 520 contributing primary resources and only 16 noncontributing primary resources. There are 638 contributing resources and 264 noncontributing resources within the Walnut Hill Historic District. Of the 902 total resources, this includes 864 buildings, 36 structures, 1 site, and 1 object. The majority of the 264 noncontributing resources are secondary resources built after 1972. The 638 contributing resources remain mostly intact with very few modifications to their architectural integrity. One property, Christ and Grace Episcopal Church, a contributing resource in the Walnut Hill Historic District, is individually listed in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP 2020). The neighborhood remains highly representative of an early 20th century planned suburban neighborhood in the region including the streets, layout, styles, and residence types.

Narrative Description

Setting

The Walnut Hill Historic District is composed of a 280-acre community in the city of Petersburg, Virginia. The eastern edge of the district is approximately 0.5 miles from Interstate 95 and the northern boundary is several hundred feet south of Interstate 85. The community is directly connected to the downtown area of Petersburg by South Sycamore Street, which crosses over Lieutenant Run. Walnut Hill Historic District is composed of two sections: the original platted area (Walnut Hill subdivision), and an addition to the northeast (a portion of Walnut Hill Addition). The original historic area is oriented along Westover Avenue, the main road that runs northwest-southeast with a grid, street pattern around it. The houses primarily face along the northwest-southeast thoroughfares with the interior cross streets serving as small connectors through the community. The historic boundaries of Walnut Hill subdivision were created such that North, South, East, and West boulevards essentially encircled the suburb, and were the primary connectors to areas outside of the neighborhood.

The community is almost entirely residential, and nearly all of the dwellings are single-family houses. The residential lots vary in size with those on Westover Avenue typically twice as large as those in the rest of the district: the lots on Westover Avenue measure 100 feet wide, whereas the other streets in the community were typically platted anywhere from 50 feet to 75 feet wide, and a Westover Avenue property contains nearly 0.45 acres, while other properties in the community typically contain between 0.18 to 0.30 acres. Setbacks are uniform throughout the neighborhood due to an original deed covenant that required houses to stand 40 feet back from the property line. Properties are landscaped with grass lawns, shrubs, trees, and other plantings, typically around the foundations. Many of the properties incorporate driveways, attached or freestanding garages, and sheds. Many of the secondary buildings date from the same period as the house, with some displaying the fashionable architectural styles of the period in which they were constructed. Sidewalks run along each of the streets and mature shade trees stand intermittently along the sidewalks. Alleys bisect the blocks and provide access to many of the freestanding garages located at the rear of the properties.

Architectural Development

The architecture in Walnut Hill, almost entirely residential, includes buildings that date throughout the 20th century, beginning in 1913, with a few examples of infill built during the early 21st century. Much of the neighborhood was completed by the eve of World War II with the largest percentage of construction, 39 percent, having occurred in the 1920s. Owing to the heavy building campaign of the 1920s, the Colonial Revival style dominates the landscape across Walnut Hill with other styles of the period playing a smaller role. The range of styles and details includes early 20th century high-style versions to vernacular interpretations of these styles and of those traditionally erected decades earlier. The array of houses includes large, three-story, high-style mansions to common bungalows and modest, one-story, minimal traditional houses. The built fabric incorporates a variety of construction materials—wood frame, brick, concrete, and stone—and feature an assortment of details fashionable at the time of its construction.

Architectural styles presented in Walnut Hill are dominated by the various stylistic revivals including Colonial Revival, Spanish/Mission Revival, Italian Renaissance Revival, Tudor Revival, Dutch Colonial Revival, and Neoclassical. Other architectural styles found in Walnut Hill include the Minimal Traditional, Contemporary, Craftsman, Prairie School, and Ranch. Common forms found throughout the community include American Foursquare, Cape Cods, ranches, and central hall plans. The dominant style is Colonial Revival, used for over half of the neighborhood—301 primary resources. Out of the 536 properties within Walnut Hill, 528 are single-family dwellings. The remaining resources include two churches, two apartment buildings, and four duplexes.

The first house built in Walnut Hill may have been 1538 Westover Avenue (123-5505-0073) built in 1913 as a Colonial Revival-style two-and-a-half story, stucco-clad house. The house features an irregular-shaped footprint, is capped with a hipped roof, and has one interior chimney. The roof is clad with slate shingles and features wide eaves. The façade is composed of symmetrical fenestration with a central entry that holds a single-leaf, paneled door illuminated with six-light-over-one-panel sidelights and a multi-light fanlight transom. The entrance is sheltered with a flat-roof portico supported with paired Tuscan wood columns and detailed with exposed roof rafters common to the Craftsman style. Flanking the entry are two tripartite windows, each with 6/1, 12/1, and 6/1 double-hung, wood windows. The second story is pierced with two 8/1, wood windows flanking a central bay with double-leaf, 8-light doors. This central door on the second story has a 12-light transom and a segmental-arch door frame with a wood keystone detail. Above the roof on the façade is a hipped-roof dormer with a 14-light awning window, a Craftsman-style detail. The southeast elevation has a one-story wing clad with vertical-board siding. The portico, the one-story wing, and a small bump-out on the northwest elevation are detailed with a rooftop balustrade with turned balusters.

The Colonial Revival style is the most popular architectural style in the Walnut Hill Historic District, making up over 56 percent of the building stock. Walnut Hill is home to a variety of versions covering the spectrum of high-style, three-story, grand homes to small, vernacular Cape Cods. The Colonial Revival style many times was reduced to classical detailing around the entry with either broken, open, or full pediments and fluted or flush pilasters coupled with symmetrical fenestration. Additional details might include cornice returns, open pediments in the gables, Tuscan columns, denticulated cornices, boxed eaves, belt courses, and jack arch lintels.

One of the finest examples of a high-style Colonial Revival house is 1587 Westover Avenue (123-5505-0011), which is also one of the earliest dwellings in Walnut Hill, built in 1915. This brick house is two-and-a-half stories in height, three bays wide, with a side-gable roof sheathed with slate shingles, and one interior-end brick chimney. It is set on a solid brick stretcher foundation and is clad with stretcher-bond brick. The symmetrical fenestration features a central entry and tripartite, double-hung, multi-light windows on both the first and second stories. The first-story windows are topped with three-part transoms. The windows are supported with concrete, jack keystone arch lintels, and concrete squared sills. The entrance features a single-leaf, paneled wood door, multi sidelights over one panel, and an elliptical fanlight. The entrance is sheltered with a one-story, one-bay portico supported with fluted Tuscan columns. Rising above the roof are three dormers across the façade. The center dormer has an arched roof and a semi-circular arched window. The outer dormers are capped with gables and pierced with casement windows. Additional details of this house include molded cornice returns, wide boxed eaves, a corbeled chimney cap, and a side one-story porch with fluted columns on the southeast elevation. Other examples of this type—two-and-a-half story, rectangular-shaped, three-bay, high-style Colonial Revival dwelling—are 1614 Westover Avenue (123-5505-0064), 1562 Westover Avenue (123-5505-0070), and 1546 Westover Avenue (123-5505-0072). A five-bay example, with a hipped roof, is sited at 1771 Westover Avenue (123-5505-0031). Built in 1922, this house is further differentiated by the presence of a porte cochere on one side elevation.

Another version of the Colonial Revival style noted in Walnut Hill is represented in the early 20th century building form, the American foursquare. A total of 30 dwellings in Walnut Hill demonstrate the foursquare form. This form was commonly ornamented with either Colonial Revival- or Craftsman-style detailing. The two-story, four-room-per-floor house plan without a hall is a much-used concept that refers to the hall-parlor plan of the 18th century. One illustration of the numerous American foursquares exhibiting Colonial Revival architectural detailing fashionable in the early part of the 20th century is the house at 1627 Berkeley Avenue (123-5505-0095). Built in 1916, this foursquare is two-and-a-half stories in height and three bays wide featuring symmetrical fenestration. It is capped with a hipped roof, set on a solid brick foundation, and clad with weatherboard siding. The central, single-leaf, entry is detailed with an arched surround and full-height sidelights. Sheltering the first story is a full-width, hipped-roof porch supported with wood columns and square wood balusters. The façade has a hipped roof dormer with two lattice casements and the roof features overhanging eaves. Several other representative foursquare examples include 1547 Berkeley Avenue (123-5505-0083), 1743 Berkeley Avenue (123-5505-0113), 1760 Varina Avenue (123-5505-0242), 1828 Brandon Avenue (123-5505-0339), and 1613 Mount Vernon Street (123-5505-0499).

The Colonial Revival style was adapted to meet the housing needs of many suburban neighborhoods in the area in the middle part of the 20th century. There is a proliferation of one-and-a-half story Cape Cod cottages throughout all parts of Walnut Hill accounting for 62 properties. Primarily dating from the 1930s and 1940s, these Cape Cods exhibit the familiar detailing and form commonly associated with the Colonial Revival style. This form provided an adequate and affordable housing mode for the growing population of working- and middle-class residents of Petersburg, while mimicking the fashionable style of the period. It is typically constructed of brick or wood-frame with a side-gable roof and front gable dormers. The examples identified in the Walnut Hill Historic District are on average three bays wide, two bays deep, and have a central-passage plan. Detailing includes the flat door surrounds with shallow Tuscan pilasters supporting a slightly projecting entablature, symmetrical fenestration with a central entry flanked by double-hung windows, and gable dormers illuminated with double-hung windows. A few examples of Cape Cod dwellings in Walnut Hill that reflect these details include 1670 Powhatan Avenue (123-5505-0210), 1745 Matoax Avenue (123-5505-0279), 1755 Brandon Avenue (123-5505-0368), and 1691 Fairfax Avenue (123-5505-0410).

The Craftsman style is the second-most common style of the early 20th century in Walnut Hill. Fifty Craftsman-style houses and bungalows are dispersed throughout the neighborhood ranging in date between 1915 and 1930, with just over 2/3 of them dating to the 1920s. One of the most architecturally significant examples in the district is 1630 Berkeley Avenue dating to 1915.

The house at 1630 Berkeley Avenue (123-5505-0163) is three bays, one-and-a-half stories on a solid brick foundation. It is a wood-frame house clad in weatherboard capped with a hipped roof with extremely wide, overhanging eaves, exposed tail rafters, and is sheathed in asphalt shingles. Two, hipped dormer windows extend off the side roof slopes. There are two, corbeled, brick, shouldered, exterior-end chimneys. The front, central entrance has a single-leaf, paneled wood door with side lights. The windows on the façade include casements and double-hung wood windows with diamond-shaped lights. A large, hipped-roof porch projects from the main roof. It is supported by paired Tuscan columns on brick piers.

A representative example of a 1920s Craftsman bungalow in Walnut Hill is 1843 Berkeley Avenue (123-5505-0128). The 1927, stucco-clad, two-bay house is one-and-a-half-stories in height and is covered by a side-gabled roof sheathed in standing-seam metal. The roof features wide eaves with exposed, stepped, roof rafters. The façade features a full width, inset porch supported by large, battered posts on brick piers. The house is asymmetrically fenestrated with an off-center, main entrance with a single-leaf, Craftsman-style glazed door. Other fenestration includes 1/1, double-hung-sash, wood windows. A gabled dormer projects from the slope of the roof and is pierced with paired 4/1, double-hung-sash, wood windows. One exterior-end brick chimney with stepped shoulders rises above the roof.

Twenty-six examples of the Tudor Revival style are interspersed throughout Walnut Hill with the earliest example built in 1915 at 1555 Westover Avenue (123-5505-0007). This large two-and-a-half story, stucco-clad house is four bays wide with a full-width, one-story porch on the facade. Its Tudor Revival details include an irregular-shaped footprint, overhanging eaves with exposed rafter ends, a jerkinhead roof, projecting gable blocks of varying sizes, a variety of windows including diamond-light casements, an off-center, single-leaf door, and the horizontal, vertical, and diagonal stickwork decorating the projecting gables. Other details include a slate-shingle roof, one interior-central, corbeled, brick chimney, one exterior-end, brick chimney, and tapered columns supporting the porch.

Another example representative of the Tudor Revival style is located at 1615 Mount Vernon Street (123-5505-0500) built circa 1930. This masonry house sits on a continuous brick foundation, is two stories in height, features a front gable projection, and is covered by a hipped roof sheathed in asphalt shingles. The exterior is clad in stucco, stone veneer, and false-half timbering with a herringbone pattern brick infill. Common to the Tudor Revival style, this house is detailed with a steep slope to the side elevation creating a side porch, which is supported by square, stone columns. The house features a recessed, off-center entrance with a single-leaf, paneled wood door. Other fenestration includes replacement vinyl windows. Rising above the roof is a large interior end, corbeled brick and stone-veneer chimney typical of the Tudor Revival style.

The most common examples of the Tudor Revival style in Walnut Hill are from the 1930s and 1940s and feature a Cape Cod or Minimal Traditional form but are detailed with a large chimney on the façade, typically in the center, off-center near the entry, or centered on a front gable. The house at 1735 Berkeley Avenue (123-5505-0111) is representative of this type. Built in 1942, this wood-frame dwelling is a one-and-a-half stories in height and four bays wide with a one-story, one-bay wing with a basement that was originally a garage. The house is clad with weatherboard siding, has a side-gable roof, and a projecting front-gable. The house is visually dominated by the exterior, front, shouldered brick chimney centered on the projecting gable. The single-leaf entry is sheltered with a two-bay, shed-roof porch supported with wood posts. The house is pierced with 6/1, double-hung, wood-sash windows and the side wing features a paired 2/2, horizontal-light wood windows. A gable dormer with one 6/1, wood window and exposed roof rafters is on the front elevation.

Seventeen dwellings exhibit the Dutch Colonial Revival style in Walnut Hill, fourteen of which were built during the 1920s. This collection of houses come in a variety of materials, ranging from weatherboard, brick, and stucco. In addition, the other feature of varying form includes the front porch; ranging from full-width versions to small porticos, and in some cases there is no front porch or portico. Consistent features across all 17 Dutch Colonial Revival-style houses are the gambrel roof form, the shed-roof dormer on the façade, and the symmetrical fenestration. One of the vernacular versions of the Dutch Colonial Revival style is the house at 1833 Matoax Avenue (123-5505-0290). Built in 1924, this wood-frame house sits on a solid brick foundation, is one-and-a-half stories in height, three-bays wide, and is covered by a gambrel roof. The exterior is clad in weatherboard siding, and the central portico is supported by paired Tuscan squared posts. The central entry holds a single-leaf door, which is illuminated with a five-light transom. The shed-roof dormer is three bays wide and there is one interior-end, corbeled brick chimney.

Five Spanish/Mission Revival houses stand in the Walnut Hill Historic District all built between 1917 and 1930: 1557 South Sycamore Street, 1729 Johnson Road, 1645 Berkeley Avenue, 1811 Varina Avenue, and 1710 Fairfax Street. The 1925, two-story house at 1729 Johnson Road

(123-5505-0228) is clad with stucco and is four bays wide. It is covered by a low, side-gabled roof that is lined with a parapet and sheathed in terra cotta shingles. A three-story tower topped with a hipped roof is located on the side of the building. The building is asymmetrically fenestrated with an off center, recessed primary entrance holding a single-leaf, fully-glazed, wood door with side lights. Other fenestration includes French doors and 1/1, double-hung-sash, vinyl windows flanked with board shutters. Rising above the tower roof is a stucco, interior-end chimney. A second stucco-clad, exterior-end chimney is on the opposite side of the building. Other details include the wide, boxed eaves, shallow-pitched roof, arched windows, and an arched doorway with curvilinear detailing at the corners.

The Italian Renaissance style dots the landscape in Walnut Hill at nine locations. Most of these examples reflect this style through two or more of the following characteristics: shallow-pitched roofs, wide eaves, tall first story windows, or the use of arched surrounds. These nine properties range in date from 1915 to 1930. Reflecting many of the details common to the Italian Renaissance style is the dwelling at 1701 South Sycamore Street (123-5505-0442) built in 1930. These details include the stucco covering, semi-circular arched bays, arched windows, wide boxed eaves, classical columns supporting the portico, and clay roof tiles. This house is two-and-a-half stories in height, with three symmetrical bays, and capped with a hipped roof. It features a square-shaped footprint with a one-story, sunroom on one side elevation. The centered portico is topped with an iron balustrade, and it shelters a rounded, wood door. The façade is pierced with 6/1, double-hung-sash, wood windows. Rising above the roof is an exterior end, stucco-clad chimney.

Nine examples of the Neo-classical style stand in Walnut Hill and feature the classically-derived design and ornamentation typical of early-twentieth-century approaches to a style that had been introduced to Virginia during the first decades after the American Revolution. The Maclin-Bigley House was built in 1915 at 1622 Westover Avenue (123-5341). This is a two-and-a-half story, brick house, set in a rectangular-shaped footprint capped with a side-gable, slate-shingle roof. Constructed in Flemish-bond brick, the house features a visually prominent porch across the full-height and width of the façade that makes it stand out among many of the houses in Walnut Hill. It is supported with wood Corinthian columns and features a rooftop balustrade. The symmetrical façade is five bays wide with a central entry, which holds a multi-light storm door and eight-light panes over one-panel sidelights. The entrance is detailed with a heavily molded door surround with Tuscan pilasters. Flanking the entry on each side are two sets of French doors topped with semi-circular, brick lintels with interior, concrete panels, and concrete keystones. The second story is pierced with 6/6, double-hung, wood windows with concrete sills, and jack-arch lintels. Three dormers adorn the façade each with an arched, double-hung, wood window. Other details include a molded, wood cornice with returns, two interior-end, brick corbeled chimneys, and a two-story rear addition.

The large, brick dwelling at 1731 Brandon Avenue (123-5505-0370) is differentiated to that of 1622 Westover Avenue by the use of a two-story portico instead of a full-width, two-story porch. Built in 1923, the brick house at 1731 Brandon Avenue is two-and-a-half stories and three bays wide with a rectangular-shaped footprint, side-gable, slate-shingle roof, and a rear, gable, ell addition.

Details of this house include symmetrical fenestration, a central, single-leaf entry with side-lights and a fanlight transom, and French doors flanking the entry. The façade is pierced with 6/6 wood windows and a balconette projects from this elevation. Other details include brick corbeled chimneys, overhanging boxed eaves, and a porte cochere. Dominating the façade is the typical Neo-classical style full-height, gable portico supported with paired Tuscan columns featuring a large Tuscan entablature.

A more vernacular version of the Neo-classical style in Walnut Hill is one-story tall with a rectangular-shaped footprint, three-bay façade, and a large gable portico supported with classical posts or columns. The house at 1814 East Boulevard (123-5505-0385), built in 1929, is a good example of this version of Neo-classical architecture. One story tall and three bays wide, this house is capped with a hipped roof sheathed in standing-seam metal. The exterior is clad in stretcher bond brick and the large porch is supported with paired, square, wood posts. The porch features a full pediment with a raking cornice, and a half-circle window in the gable. The off-center entrance holds a single-leaf, paneled, wood door with lights and the façade is further pierced with 1/1, double-hung-sash, metal windows. Additional details include an interior-end, corbeled, brick chimney, wide boxed eaves, and rowlock sills. Similar examples include 1807 Varina Avenue (123-5505-0265) and 1774 Chuckatuck Avenue (123-5505-0526).

The house at 1623 Berkeley Avenue (123-5505-0094) is characterized as Neo-Classical Revival because of the full-width, one-story porch that is supported with Corinthian paneled columns, in conjunction with the large modillions in the wide eaves and denticulated cornice. The house is also detailed with symmetrical fenestration, double-hung windows, a central entrance with a full transom and sidelights. This brick house has a square-shaped footprint and a shallow-pitched, hipped roof. The two-story, wood-frame house at 1754 Matoax Avenue (123-5505-0308) features a Neo-Classical Revival porch with its large, gable portico detailed with a full pediment with a raking cornice, square posts, and pilasters. The pediment also features large modillions and a denticulated cornice.

The Prairie School style is an uncommon style in Petersburg and the surrounding region. It is exhibited in only two examples in Walnut Hill: 1706 Westover Avenue (123-5505-0055) and 1513 South Sycamore Street (123-5505-0427). The house at 1706 Westover Avenue built in 1915 is rumored to have been designed by an architect with a close association to Frank Lloyd Wright. Rising two-and-a-half stories in height, this house features an irregular-shaped footprint with a cross-hipped roof. The exterior walls are clad with stretcher-bond brick. It has a one-story porch on one side elevation, a porte cochere on the opposite elevation, and the central entry within a three-bay façade, which is sheltered with a one-story portico supported with square, brick posts. The front entry has a single-leaf, wood paneled door with full-height sidelights and a three-part transom. The windows throughout the house are 1/1, wood-sash windows with squared concrete sills. The first-story windows are detailed with a brick, flat lintel with concrete, corner blocks and a similar concrete, keystone block. Important to the Prairie School style and seen here, are the wide eaves, which are further detailed with coffered panels. Four interior, brick chimneys and two, hipped-roof dormers rise above the roof. The dormers hold three, lattice, casement windows.

Additional architectural features include a rooftop balustrade on the side porch, corbeled chimney caps, and louvered wood shutters with moon cutouts.

The Minimal Traditional style is prevalent across Walnut Hill. A total of 64 primary buildings represent this style within the building stock. It was one of the more popular styles used during the mid-20th century due to its cost efficiency and accessibility to the middle-class builder. Born out of the Tudor Revival, the Minimal Traditional style features several characteristics of that style such as large chimneys, asymmetry, and a front gable either projecting from the roof or as a front portico. Minimal Traditional houses are typically one story in height and three bays wide, keeping to a small rectangular or L-shaped footprint. The house at 1834 Brandon Avenue (123-5505-0341) built in 1930 is one of the earlier versions of the Minimal Traditional style in the district. It is one story, three bays wide, clad with stretcher-bond brick, and capped with a cross-gable roof. It features a projecting, front gable on the façade, a shed-roof porch supported with square posts, and symmetrical fenestration. There is one, interior-end, corbeled, brick chimney and the gables are detailed with half-timbering and stucco infill. Additional examples of front-gable versions include 1623 South Sycamore Street (123-5505-0433) built in 1950 and 1653 Fairfax Street (123-5505-0407) built in 1951. Representative versions of the Minimal Traditional style in Walnut Hill without a front gable can be found at 1662 Monticello Street (123-5505-0451) built in 1947, 1862 East Avenue (123-5505-0393) built in 1951, and 1858 Brandon Avenue (123-5505-0347) built in 1957.

The Ranch style was developed during the 1930s with stylistic features such as a low-to-the-ground composition, use of local construction materials, and a private, screened front façade with the rear open to gardens in the back. This particular style became exceptionally popular during the 1950s and it became recognized for its sprawling footprint. Versions from the 1950s and later added large picture windows to the façades.

The house at 12 Hillcrest Road (123-5505-0423) is a typical example of the Ranch style in Walnut Hill. Built in 1965, it sits on a solid brick foundation, is one story in height, measures four-bays wide, and is covered by a side-gabled roof featuring wide eaves. The exterior is clad in stretcher-bond brick, and the asymmetrical fenestration features an off-center entrance, and ribbons of fixed windows. There are a total of 34 Ranch style houses in Walnut Hill mostly constructed as infill during the 1950s and 1960s with only four built after the 1960s. Other representative examples of the Ranch style in Walnut Hill include 1747 Brandon Avenue (123-5505-0369), 1710 Mount Vernon Street (123-5505-0482), and 1121 South Boulevard (123-5505-0234).

Two apartment complexes stand within the Walnut Hill Historic District. The complex at 1676 South Sycamore Street (123-5505-0417) is composed of five buildings all nearly identical in their subdued detailing in the Colonial Revival style built in 1936. These buildings are two-and-a-half stories in height, clad with stretcher-bond brick, and capped with hipped roofs. They are fenestrated with double-hung windows, illuminated with gable dormers, and detailed with pedimented door surrounds with pilasters. The second apartment complex, located at 1689-1693 South Sycamore Street (123-5505-0441), was constructed in the Italian Renaissance style in 1930. This is an L-shaped, two-story, stucco-clad building capped with a flat roof with a parapet lined with clay tiles. Within the ell of the façade is a one-story, arcade-style porch with a roof-top balustrade.

In addition to the domestic buildings throughout Walnut Hill, there are two churches within the community. These are Christ and Grace Episcopal Church at 1545 South Sycamore Street and a church at 1668 South Sycamore Street that is currently vacant. These two churches reflect very different styles and form although they were built or partially built within several years of each other.

The Christ and Grace Episcopal Church (123-5506) is an impressive structure standing at the northern end of South Sycamore Street. The primary church block, built in 1955, consists of a tall, seven-bay nave under a steeply pitched, front-gable, slate-shingle roof. The brick building is constructed in eight-course, American-bond brick with stone trim. The gable ends feature brick parapets capped with stone copings. The Gothic-style windows are filled with stained glass, and most are filled with stone tracery. Buttresses with stone shoulders and topped with gablets divide each of the side bays. The front entry is set within a projecting lower wall, and the double-leaf wood door is deeply set in a molded stone Gothic arch opening. A large, tripartite window filled with stone tracery illuminates the front elevation, which is the west elevation. The nave is connected to a two-story, parish building, part of the original 1925 church, to the south by a recessed hyphen forming a west-facing courtyard.

Erected shortly after the addition to the high-style Grace and Christ Episcopal Church is the communities second church just two blocks to the south. The church at 1668 South Sycamore Street (123-5505-0418) was built in 1959 in a restrained Colonial Revival-style. It sits on a solid brick foundation and features a T-shaped footprint. The church is one-story in height, measures three bays wide, and is covered with a cross-gabled roof sheathed in asphalt shingles. The exterior is clad in stretcher-bond brick. A cupola rises above the roof. The symmetrical fenestration features a centered main entrance, which holds a double-leaf, paneled, wood door, flanked by 1/1, double-hung-sash, vinyl windows.

Development After 1950

A surge of construction between 1949 and 1951 was primarily the infill of lots across much of the community. A substantial drop in construction in Walnut Hill started in 1960 and remained at an extremely low level through the rest of the 20th century. Nearly all of the lots had been improved upon up to this point. Only 27 buildings were constructed between 1960 and 2022. Many of these houses are compatible with the historic housing stock seen throughout Walnut Hill. Most reflect the Ranch style or use Colonial-Revival style forms and characteristics seen with the earlier houses. One such example is 395 North Boulevard (123-5505-0214), which is a one-story ranch house with a large front-gable porch on the façade. It has a large picture window and overhanging eaves typical of ranch houses. Other examples that have historic characteristics but date after the period of significance include 950 Bermuda Street (123-5505-0186), 1804 East Boulevard (123-5505-0383), and 1847 Berkeley Avenue (123-5505-0129).

Although most of the infill housing from this period is compatible, there are a few buildings that are not characteristic of the neighborhood. The contemporary dwelling at 1628 Mount Vernon Street (123-5505-0495) was built during the mid-1980s and the split, steep roof form and minimal detailing is not in keeping with the neighborhood. Another example that is not compatible with the district is 1707 Varina Avenue (123-5505-0251), which is a Colonial Revival-style, modern house. It has some historic characteristics, however, its multiple gables, both side- and front-facing, and varying roof heights are not typical of the Colonial-Revival style nor of historic house forms that use that style.

Integrity Analysis

The Walnut Hill Historic District retains a high level of integrity and is able to convey its historic significance and appearance as a 20th century suburban neighborhood in Petersburg, Virginia. Very little construction has occurred since the last quarter of the 20th century and very few lots have remained vacant. Much of the post-1972 construction in Walnut Hill is an extension of the architectural trends of the mid-20th century in design, materials, forms, and scale. Most of these properties that postdate the period of significance are compatible and not visually intrusive. The boundaries of the district include the original neighborhood plat boundaries and the northern portion of the first expansion, which was included in the city's annexation. The properties within these boundaries retain the original setbacks, in many cases, historic secondary resources and minor architectural modifications, if any. The district retains excellent integrity of location, design, feeling, setting, workmanship, and association. The integrity of materials is good, although a number of houses have some replacement materials, such as windows and roof cladding. These replacements do not detract from the buildings ability to convey sense of place and the district's architectural significance. The district's architecture continues to display original methods of construction, styles and forms of the period, and materials, resulting in integrity of workmanship and materials.

Historic District Inventory

The following is a list of resources located within the historic district. The resources are listed alphabetically by street name and numerically by address number. DHR historic district numbers are listed for each resource, as are numbers previously assigned to individual resources. In the following inventory all resources, both primary and secondary, have been considered either contributing or noncontributing based upon the areas of significance identified under Criterion A, Community Planning and Development, and under Criterion C, Architecture; during the period of significance identified as 1913 to 1972; and on whether the resource retains sufficient integrity to convey its historic associations. A few secondary resources do not have a status listed as they were identified in aerial photography but not verified in the field. Resources are keyed to the attached Sketch Maps using the last four digits of the resource's 11-digit inventory number (e.g., for resource #123-5505-0001, the resource location is identified as -0001 on the map).

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

The Walnut Hill neighborhood is a historically and architecturally significant planned suburb of Petersburg, Virginia. It was platted in 1912 by the Walnut Hill Corporation, led by a few of the city's most prominent businessmen, and the first houses were built the following year. Its first expansion was just three years after its original establishment. This quick expansion was in response to the growing housing needs experienced throughout the Petersburg area in large part due to the massive influx of people following the establishment of the E.I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Plant in 1913 in neighboring Hopewell, Virginia. Walnut Hill steadily grew during the 1910s and 1920s, with nearly half of the community erected during this period. As was common during the Jim Crow era of segregation, the neighborhood was restricted to white, middle- and upper-middle class residents, for whom it became a convenient locale due to its proximity and ease of transportation to the warehouses, mills, and businesses of downtown Petersburg. The district has retained a cohesive, suburban feel throughout its existence in its layout, landscape, uses, and architecture. The Walnut Hill Historic District is eligible for the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion A at the local level in the area of Community Planning and Development for its contribution to Petersburg as a significant example of a residential community that reflects both regional and national trends in its planning and growth as a suburban neighborhood during the early 20th century. The district is eligible under Criterion C at the local level in the area of Architecture because of its exceptional collection of well-preserved buildings constructed between 1913 and 1972 that are significant for design in keeping with fashionable styles and forms of the pre-World War II period and how those trends were adapted following the war into the third quarter of the twentieth century. Several individual resources are among the finest examples of a particular style in all of Petersburg, such as the Prairie Style dwelling at 1706 Westover Avenue (123-5505-0055), the Italian Renaissance house at 1701 South Sycamore Street (123-5505-0442), and the Spanish/Mission Revival residence at 1729 Johnson Road (123-5505-0228). Architects whose work are extant in the district include Charles K. Bryant, George B. Keeler, Benjamin F. Keller, S. Saley Craig, Frank Rushmore Watson, and the firm Ferguson, Calrow and Wrenn. Individually listed in the Virginia Landmarks Register in 2019 and the NRHP in 2020, South and Grace Episcopal Church (SG100005011; 123-5506) is another locally significant architectural design listed under Criterion C. The district's period of significance, 1913 to 1972, includes the neighborhood's first construction and encompasses its development as a suburban residential community.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

Criterion A: Community Planning and Development

Walnut Hill meets Criterion A with local significance in the area of Community Planning and Development as a planned community that developed due to the need for housing for a growing population and because of its attraction to the expanding white, middle- and upper-middle class population of Petersburg, Virginia, between the 1910s and early 1970s. Construction of a viaduct over Lieutenant Run provided access, by way of a streetcar, to the area from the center of

Walnut Hill Historic District

County and State

Petersburg to the outlying neighborhood and connected the city's businesses and banks to this new residential section. The burgeoning suburban growth soon transformed the rural landscape where Walnut Hill was situated, which, in 1921, became Petersburg's first annexation to the city. Walnut Hill was marketed as the area's best address and became highly sought-after by middle- and upper-middle class families, which propelled its growth to become one of Petersburg's largest and most cohesive residential neighborhoods serving both the business leaders and the middle-class workers of the area. In keeping with widespread practices of the period, the properties in Walnut Hill included covenants that restricted sale of property only to white people. Although the Supreme Court invalidated such covenants in its 1948 Shelley v. Kraemer decision, racial covenants continued to be written into deeds until the practice was outlawed by the 1968 Fair Housing Act. Reflective of the segregationist practices throughout Virginia through the 1960s, African Americans had limited access to Walnut Hill, except for those individuals who worked as domestic servants, sometimes on a live-in basis.

Criterion C: Architecture

The neighborhood of Walnut Hill is locally significant under Criterion C in the area of Architecture for its substantial concentration of domestic architecture, primarily representing the Colonial Revival, Craftsman, Tudor Revival, Ranch, and Minimal Traditional styles from the first half the 20th century into the 1970s. Local builders and Virginia architects designed and built the residences according to the restrictions established by the Walnut Hill Corporation. In addition to racial restrictions that were common during the Jim Crow era, deed covenants concerned siting of the house and value of construction. All but two individual properties within Walnut Hill are residential, and the majority of these dwellings reflect the Colonial Revival style. Other styles represented throughout the district with much less frequency include the Bungalow/Craftsman, Tudor Revival, Spanish/Mission Revival, Italian Renaissance Revival, Late Gothic Revival, Prairie School, Ranch, and Minimal Traditional. Set back from the street, many of these dwellings, both large and small, were augmented by sun porches, side wings, rear ells, and in some cases free-standing garages. The dwellings of the second and third quarters of the 20th century are similar in style to the earlier dwellings, many times using Colonial Revival-style elements. Much of the difference between the earlier houses and the later dwellings rests primarily in the level of ornament, the latter being much more modest in detail, rapid, significant changes in construction methods, materials, and technology between the 1910s and early 1970s, and adaptations to changing family lifestyles during the same period. Therefore, of importance in Walnut Hill is the contrast between the grand houses on Westover Avenue and on South Sycamore Street to that of the rest of the district in terms of size, craftsmanship, materials, and professional design of the dwellings. Walnut Hill exhibits the full range of house forms and styles popular in 20th century Virginia. This community is home to some of the most exceptional examples of fashionable, high-style, designed mansions in Petersburg with neighboring streets and homes displaying the modest and subdued vernacular versions of those styles.

HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

Origins of Prince George County and the Creation of Petersburg

The lands that comprised Prince George County were originally colonized by the Virginia Company as part of Charles City County. The James River split the county in two sections, and eventually, many residents did not wish to travel across the James River to attend court and conduct business. Therefore, the Virginia Assembly officially established Prince George County in 1703.

Fort Henry, built in 1645 at the falls of the Appomattox River, became a trading post for the Virginia colony, with much of its trade with Virginia Indians during the late 17th century. In 1733, this developed as the core of the new town of Petersburg. It was planned by William Byrd II, with lots on the lands of Abraham Jones in Prince George County. In 1748, the Virginia General Assembly incorporated the town and a few years later in 1752, a western section of Prince George County, including Petersburg to the north, was used to form Dinwiddie County.

During the 17th and 18th centuries, tobacco plantations developed in the surrounding countryside of Petersburg and numerous tobacco warehouses were constructed in the new town. In addition, water-powered mills were built along the Appomattox River and the town became a critical commercial harbor for manufactured goods and for the trade of tobacco, cotton, and other products from the surrounding region.¹

In 1849, the Southside Railroad was constructed along the southern shore of the Appomattox River and a connection of the Petersburg and Roanoke Railroad travelled south from near the eastern edge of the city. This expanded Petersburg importance as a commercial and manufacturing hub in the South. The advances in transportation also increased Petersburg's success in the tobacco industry and it continued to play an important role in Petersburg's economy throughout the 19th and early 20th centuries. Petersburg's second most important industry during this time was the manufacture of cotton. In 1915, tobacco and cotton remained Petersburg's top two export products with luggage and peanuts respectively as the third and fourth top exports.²

Petersburg began on the south bank of the Appomattox River and spread south, west, and east throughout the 18th and 19th centuries. Petersburg's boundaries by the turn of the 20th century extended east to include the area of Blandford, west to include the Pride's Field area, and south to Lieutenant Run. Farmland occupied the south side of Lieutenant Run. The farm immediately south of Petersburg's center was owned by members of the Willcox family, and at one point, it was called Walnut Hill (Figure 1).

History of Walnut Hill Farm

John Vaughn Willcox at one point owned a large farm south of Petersburg, which he referred to as Walnut Hill. Willcox was also proprietor of Flowerdew Hundred through marriage to Susannah Poythress beginning in 1804. Flowerdew Hundred, originally a 1,000-acre plantation, was first patented in 1618/1619 along the James River, east of what became Petersburg. Over the years, sections of it were sold until Willcox and his son reformed it to its original 1,000-acre patent boundaries. He also built the mansion house in 1805, which was his primary residence for several years prior to moving to Bollingbrook Street in Petersburg after his wife's death in 1815.³

John Vaughn Willcox died in 1863 and left 555 acres south of Petersburg to his daughter, Mary Edloe Brown. She passed away five years later, and interest in this land was divided between her two surviving sons, Henry Peronneau Brown (born 1832) and John Willcox Brown (born 1833). John Willcox Brown sold his interest in the farm to Oliver Palmer, who in turn conveyed it to Henry Peronneau Brown. In 1894, Henry Peronneau Brown passed away and 249.30 acres of the Walnut Hill farm was willed to his son, John Thompson Brown III. On August 16, 1906, John Brown, III had the property surveyed, and a plat was drawn by W.C. Rives and Brothers.⁴ The Rives plat depicts the area used to create the future Walnut Hill development.

McCabe was a successful, local businessman that brokered cotton and peanuts for local manufacturing companies. Born in 1874, McCabe was only 35 years old when he bought the Walnut Hill farm from John Thompson Brown, III. A corporation was created for the development of the Walnut Hill farm for suburban residential development connected to Petersburg by a viaduct.⁶ On March 19, 1910, the Walnut Hill Corporation was granted a charter with a capital of $100,000 with Captain T.F. Heath listed as President, McCabe as Vice President, and W.D. McKenney as Secretary.⁷

Captain Tarlton F. Heath was one of the city's most prominent leaders of Petersburg when he became President of the Walnut Hill Corporation. In addition to serving this role, Heath held numerous other positions in Petersburg throughout the 1910s and 1920s including President of the Chamber of Commerce, President of the National Bank of Petersburg, President of The Bank of City Point, President of the McKesson Land Corporation, President of the Petersburg Insurance Company, and President of the Petersburg Savings and Trust Company. He also owned the Centre Hill Apartments in Petersburg.⁸

A few weeks after the Walnut Hill Corporation was chartered, an executive committee for the corporation was approved through a meeting of stockholders and directors. The executive committee was made up of Heath, McCabe, and W.G. Davis. In May 1910, Petersburg sold 19 acres of the city's "high service reservoir property" in Prince George County to McCabe at $100 per acre.⁹ The following month, Petersburg deeded 29 acres of city land to the Walnut Hill Corporation for the construction of a viaduct, across Lieutenant Run, the southern border of Petersburg.¹⁰ With all of the lands needed to create a suburban development, McCabe sold the combined 249.30 acres of the former Walnut Hill farm and the 19 acres of the reservoir to the Walnut Hill Corporation in October 1910.¹¹

Early in 1911, the Walnut Hill Corporation commissioned the construction of the 860-foot-long viaduct at a cost of $41,000 built by the Roanoke Bridge and Iron Company.¹² The viaduct provided a direct streetcar connection from the suburb to the center of Petersburg. In 1912, further connection between Walnut Hill and the city occurred when the city agreed to pay for half of the sewer line between the two entities.¹³

Between 1910 and 1912, the land was prepared by the Walnut Hill Corporation for the development of numerous blocks and lots, and a grid pattern of streets and alleys were constructed (Figure 2). The first lots sold, seven total, were deeded in 1912, primarily to women.¹⁴ The first house constructed in this group was for Mary and James A. Binford at 1538 Westover Avenue (123-5505-0073). Although Bessie Egerton at 1555 Westover Avenue (123-5505-0007) and Emily Sainsbury at 1535 Berkeley Avenue (123-5505-0080) bought their properties in 1912, it appears their houses were not completed until 1915 according to tax assessments.¹⁵ The President of the Walnut Hill Corporation, Captain Heath, purchased Lot 1 from Block 1, at the northernmost point of the neighborhood on the east side of South Sycamore Street and across from North Boulevard. The corporation required him, by way of a deed covenant, to build a house not less than $10,000. The 1918 Petersburg city directory list Heath at 1005 South Sycamore Street (currently 1513 South Sycamore Street).¹⁶

Nearly all of the first houses built in Walnut Hill were built along Westover Avenue and reflect a prosperity evidenced in the large lots, tall homes, and designs in contemporary residential high styles of the 1910s. These homes are detailed using a high level of craftsmanship and quality materials, and many are designed by architect professionals. It is this street that gave Walnut Hill the label as Petersburg's most fashionable neighborhood. This desirable address became home to a number of wealthy Petersburg families, which included many of Petersburg's highly prominent businessmen, politicians, and successful professionals. Nearly all of these affluent residents were able to purchase and construct their dwellings with no loans or with short-term loans because by 1920, the United States census lists 21 houses on Westover Avenue with all but two owned outright.¹⁷

¹⁴ These new owners were Captain T.F. Heath, Lucie Friend, Martha G. Hall, Mary G. Binford, Emily M. Sainsbury, Bessie S. Egerton, and W.H. Willcox.

¹⁵ Martha G. Hall sold her property back to Walnut Hill Corporation the next year, 1914. W.H. Willcox built a house at 1659 Berkeley Avenue around 1920, and Lucie and Alfred Friend built a house at 1723 Westover Avenue around 1920. Alfred Friend was Vice President of Friend and Company, Inc., and President of the Petersburg Trunk & Bag Company.

The value of a Westover Avenue house was generally much higher than other streets in Walnut Hill due to their larger more expansive size, elaborate details, and high-quality materials used in construction. The original deeds for the lots on Westover included a covenant that dwellings were not to cost less than $3,000. Using the 1930 census to compare real estate values between Westover Avenue to the other streets it is evident that it maintains the highest value houses. Only two houses built on South Sycamore Street exceeded those on Westover Avenue. In 1930, those on Westover Avenue ranged in value from $7,000 to $35,000 with the median value just over $14,000. The houses that rivaled these properties were Harvey Seward's Ivy Gates at 1000 South Sycamore Street, valued at $50,000 (no longer extant), and Paul Roper's house at 1591 South Sycamore Street (123-5505-0429) valued at $39,000 designed by Petersburg architect S. Daley Craig.¹⁸

Other streets in Walnut Hill, such as Brandon, Berkeley, and Matoax avenues and Monticello Street, had homes that were valued less than $10,000 in 1930 and these streets had a much higher mix of homes that were mortgaged, owned, and rented than those on Westover Avenue. The covenants included in the deeds for these smaller streets required house construction to be not less than $2,000 during the early years. Some deeds in 1920 dropped that value to $1,500.¹⁹ The properties in the areas outside of Westover Avenue were more accessible to the general white, middle-class population. There is record of only one Asian-American owner in the community, Cooper Lai, who was also one of the few architects registered in Petersburg.

Another major difference between the homes and residents on Westover Avenue to the smaller streets throughout the rest of the neighborhood is the presence of live-in, African-American servants. The only African American residents in Walnut Hill were on Westover Avenue; however, they resided there strictly as servants. The deeds for Walnut Hill included a covenant that refused African Americans rights to use, own, or rent property in the community for a period of 99 years. The servants were typically cooks, butlers, and general house servants. The only streets in Walnut Hill with live-in servants listed in the 1920 census were Westover Avenue (14 servants), South Sycamore Street (4 servants), and North Boulevard (2 servants). Just over two-thirds of the houses on Westover Avenue in 1920 had at least one African-American servant.

The prosperity exhibited in Walnut Hill was reflected throughout Petersburg during the 1910s and 1920s. Real estate values in the Petersburg area during the 1910s and 1920s had increased dramatically. As one paper described it, "suburban properties are rapidly being taken up and built upon, and dwelling houses are in great demand. Petersburg's population is increasing in pace with the increase of its industries."²⁰ Together with the surge in construction in Petersburg was a rise in the number of inhabitants, from 24,000 in 1910 to approximately 30,000 in 1913. The Richmond Times-Dispatch claimed that “there is not a vacant house in the city...and all available living space is occupied...Several thousand employees of the Du Pont plant make their homes there, and it is probable that more would do so if there were available homes.”²¹ In 1913, the E.I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company established a plant in Hopewell, Virginia, located immediately north of Petersburg. It began as a dynamite plant, and at the start of World War I a sulfuric-acid plant was built, the largest of its kind in the world. Du Pont spent a total of $25 million by the end of 1915 on machinery, construction, and buildings on this site at Hopewell.

The tobacco industry was also experiencing significant changes in Petersburg during the early 1900s that contributed to the city’s rising population. Many of the city’s tobacco companies were consolidated under the American Tobacco Company at the turn of the 20th century. In 1902, this company and the Imperial Tobacco Company of Great Britain were consolidated into the British-American Tobacco Company. In 1910, the British-American Tobacco Company moved its cigarette plant to Petersburg, which in turn became the city’s largest employer of the early 20th century.²²

The British-American Tobacco Company and the du Pont company are largely responsible for the major surge in population in the area during the 1910s. In 1915, the du Pont plant had over 20,000 employees, which created a need for homes, retail stores, additional and improved transportation, manufacturing, schools, and banks, among many other services. To help satisfy the need for homes, there were increases in development and building in East Petersburg, Colonial Heights, and Walnut Hill.²³ The value of properties paralleled this real estate surge. In 1915, Hopewell home values increased at approximately 10 percent a day whereas prior to this, values increased at 10 percent per year.²⁴ Although Walnut Hill, located on the south side of Petersburg, was not ideally suited as a commuter suburb to the Du Pont plant (located north of the city), it did provide the addition of houses to help accommodate the need in the area.

Within Walnut Hill, significant construction occurred around 1915 when these plants were well established, with approximately 30 houses built, mostly on Berkeley and Westover avenues. The Richmond Times-Dispatch reported on the contract given to E.L. Ban for the construction of a brick house for Delegate Robert W. Price (Virginia Delegate from 1914 to 1916). The notice states that “Many of the city’s most prominent citizens have erected homes on Walnut Hill, and now reside there, enjoying all the improvements and conveniences of city life, including street car service, and the population is rapidly growing.”²⁵

The flood of construction in Walnut Hill may have been due in part to the placement of advertisements in the local papers. A full-page advertisement for Walnut Hill featured in the Richmond Times-Dispatch on October 31, 1915. It claimed that Walnut Hill was “Petersburg’s Best Residence Section...Because of its Location, Beautiful Surroundings, and Many Natural advantages.” The advertisement reveals that over $300,000 in home construction had been spent during the first three years of development. Walnut Hill was a prime area for real estate investors as illustrated by this advertisement, which noted that lots had already been sold to investors, some of which had been resold for a profit of 25 to 60 percent.²⁶ Lots on South Sycamore Street originally sold for approximately $300 to $400, and in 1915 they were selling for between $3,000 to $4,000. Working with Walnut Hill Corporation to sell these lots was R.O. Egerton Real Estate Company.²⁷ Egerton’s widow built one of the first houses on Westover Avenue.

First Residents and Notable Residents

Mary G. Binford and her husband, James A. Binford, bought the property at 1538 Westover Avenue in 1912 and completed their large Craftsman-style house in 1913 (S. Daley Craig, architect). James Binford served as president and secretary of the Binford Grocery Company. Nearby, Bessie Egerton lived at 1555 Westover Avenue. Bessie Egerton had strong political connections as the sister to former Virginia governor William E. Cameron. She bought her property shortly after the death of her husband, Robert O. Egerton (d. 1911) and had her Tudor Revival-style house completed around 1913. Robert Egerton had served as a leading real estate broker in Petersburg and was known as “one of Petersburg’s most prominent, progressive and useful citizens.”²⁸ Emily M. Sainsbury bought the property at 1535 Berkeley Avenue from the Walnut Hill Corporation in 1912 when she was 46 years old. According to the Petersburg city directory she was residing in her Colonial Revival-style house by 1913–1914.²⁹ Sainsbury, born in London, England, immigrated to the United States in 1907, and worked as a trained nurse her entire career.³⁰

In 1914, Walnut Hill Corporation sold lots to 15 new owners including several prominent, local, professionals. These buyers included businessman Harvey Seward (1872–1943) of the Seward Trunk & Bag Company and Alexander D. Hamilton (1851–1916), general counsel and Vice President for Atlantic Coast Line Railway and President of the Virginia Bar Association. Seward built what became the largest and most prominent house in Walnut Hill, called Ivy Gates, at the northern end of South Sycamore Street in Walnut Hill. It is no longer extant having been demolished in 1963. Alexander Hamilton hired the young architect S. Daley Craig to design a large Craftsman-style brick house at 1746 Westover Avenue (123-5505-0050). Hamilton’s house was listed in the weekly journal The American Contractor as a wood-frame house measuring 43 X 30 feet, two-stories in height, with a pine finish and pine floors estimated at a cost of $4,000.³¹ Daley designed other residences in Walnut Hill including a Craftsman-style bungalow at 112 North Boulevard for Albert W. Walch in 1914, 1538 Westover Avenue for Mrs. Maria F. Baker,

Walnut Hill Expansion and Final Growth

Walnut Hill Corporation quickly understood the profitability of adding more residential lots to the subdivision to satisfy the area's housing needs. The members of the corporation identified a 320-acre farm owned by Elmer E. McKesson on the northeast side of Walnut Hill as the premier spot to expand. They pressured McKesson to sell his farm to Walnut Hill Corporation, which he did except for 38 acres around the farmhouse reserved for him and his family. One of the conditions of the agreement was that a new corporation, registered as McKesson Land Corporation, would receive title of the 282.54 acres from Elmer McKesson and he would obtain 50 percent of the shares of stock.³³ McKesson Land Corporation received title to the farm on December 2, 1915.³⁴

Atlantic Coast Realty was commissioned to handle the development and sale of the McKesson lands, and immediately after McKesson Land Corporation received title, they held an auction to sell the lots.³⁵ The first plat for the 1915 addition shows the development of 23 blocks east of Brandon Avenue and south of the city's reservoir set apart in two distinct sections (Figure 3). These two sections were connected by South Sycamore and Monticello streets. The northwest-southeast streets in this first plat included Fairfax, South Sycamore, Monticello, and Mount Vernon streets, and the cross streets from north to south are Fleur de Hundred, Belmead, Bremo, Claremont, and Tuckahoe.

An advertisement by Atlantic Coast Realty for the auction of lots described Walnut Hill as “Petersburg’s most fashionable residential section,”³⁶ and as “high and dry, beautifully platted and packed – will have fine streets, sidewalks, lights, water and sewerage, just as Walnut Hill has.”³⁷ Atlantic Coast Realty was one of the first real estate firms in the region to buy farms, both large plantations and small farms, for the purpose of subdividing. They generally focused on creating smaller farms out of larger ones, but in occasional instances they took on the creation of suburban developments such as Walnut Hill.³⁸ The success of the December 1915 auction is unclear. It does not appear that the lands had been prepared by that time, and gas and electric lines were not installed until 1916 and 1917. Only one sale occurred in 1916 and one in 1917. The grantor index for Prince George County lists a total of 21 sales between 1918 and 1920.³⁹ the city of Petersburg. Four neighborhoods surrounding Petersburg including Walnut Hill, Colonial Heights, Kennelworth, and Ettrick each had discussions with the city about possible annexation.⁴⁰ Walnut Hill's availability of lots, geographic proximity to downtown Petersburg, and potential tax revenue made the suburb an ideal annex for the prosperous city above all others. The Alexandria Gazette reported that the taxable personal property in the neighborhood totaled approximately $700,000 at that time and was expected to increase to as much as $1.5 million following annexation.⁴¹ In June 1921, the city offered $50,000 to Walnut Hill Corporation for the improvements to the Walnut Hill suburb toward annexation of the district.

On November 23, 1921, a special hearing was held in the Prince George County Circuit Court to determine the fate of Walnut Hill annexation. Governor Westmoreland Davis appointed Judge McLemore of Suffolk to conduct the hearing. Only two county residents opposed the annexation. Approval for annexation was nearly unanimous within the community itself.⁴² On December 1, 1921, Walnut Hill was annexed into Petersburg.⁴³ The community was then placed in Petersburg's second ward at the end of April 1922; which added approximately 800 residents to one of the city's already largest wards. This addition made the second ward the largest ward in territory in Petersburg.⁴⁴ At this time, Petersburg had a population of approximately 33,000.⁴⁵

1920s Building Boom

With soldiers returning from war there was a boost in the United States economy in 1919 that was felt in Walnut Hill. Approximately 27 houses were built in 1920, all within the original subdivision. The 1920 city directory for Petersburg contains a total of 72 listings in Walnut Hill: 28 on Berkeley Avenue, 24 on Westover Avenue, 7 on Matoax Avenue, 5 on Powhatan Avenue, 4 on North Boulevard, 3 on South Boulevard, and 1 on Varina Avenue. By the end of 1920, however, the stock market fell by over 30 percent, which led to a dramatic decrease in residential construction—only four houses were built in Walnut Hill in 1921.

The economy improved in 1922 and as noted in the Richmond Times-Dispatch, "in spite of the so-called depression throughout the country, Petersburg has been able to hold her own in so far as the building of new homes is concerned."⁴⁶ The article reports that many new homes being built cost from $1,000 to $10,000. Walnut Hill along with Colonial Heights was specifically mentioned as one of the suburbs where new homes were being built.⁴⁷ The continued prosperity in the city throughout the 1920s was visibly evident in Walnut Hill—it was the busiest decade of construction in Walnut Hill, with over 200 houses built throughout the community.

The Walnut Hill Addition did well with significant sales from McKesson Land Corporation. Between 1922 and 1929 there were 74 property conveyances. Interesting to note, 17 of these deeds were to E.B. Moore, a real estate agent with his own company.⁴⁸ Moore lived in Walnut Hill at 1810 Matoax Avenue (123-5505-0303), and presumably Moore was purchasing these lots as an investment to resell to future clients.

There was a downturn in construction in Walnut Hill towards the end of the 1920s, a trend throughout all of Petersburg. This is evident in the number of listings in the city directories related to building construction. In 1920, the Petersburg directory lists four architects; by 1927, only one architect was listed.⁴⁹ A similar decrease is evident over the same period (1920 to 1927) in the number of building contractors: from 17 to 10. Despite the tapering of construction, by the time the stock market crashed in 1929, nearly half of Walnut Hill had been developed.

Moderately sized houses, smaller lots than those on Westover Avenue, and fewer architectural details reflect the predominant type of property constructed throughout Walnut Hill between 1913 and 1929. The residents of these houses were middle class and held a variety of jobs both in the professional field and as laborers. Some of the jobs listed for residents in the 1920 and 1930 census includes clerk, bookkeeper, stenographer, nurse, railroad yardmaster, foreman for a tobacco factory, contractor, civil engineer, merchant, teacher, railroad conductor, electrician, and hotel manager. Many of the residents along Westover Avenue typically were owners, founders, and/or Presidents of one of the city's leading businesses. Catering to the middle-class, Walnut Hill streets were inhabited mostly by resident owners but there was an interspersing of renters equal to one-quarter of the Walnut Hill population excluding Westover Avenue.

Petersburg's Economic Downturn and Walnut Hill Infill Construction

Despite the economic downturn in 1929, a large number of houses were constructed in Walnut Hill in 1930. Presumably, some people chose to move their money into real estate for more stability. A total of 40 houses were built in the community in 1930, with the majority of these located in the addition. After 1930, very little building occurred in Walnut Hill and the surrounding region. As previously exhibited, Petersburg was not immune to national economic trends. The economic depression of the 1930s was felt throughout and only 34 houses were constructed in Walnut Hill between 1931 and 1939.

The second World War further depressed construction and growth in Walnut Hill between 1940 and 1945, after which a slow rise to prosperity followed in the late 1940s (Figure 4). Construction then observed a major surge between 1949 and 1951, with a total of 76 new houses, rivaling similar levels seen in the mid-to-late 1920s. These new homes were built as infill throughout the neighborhood except for a handful of streets that saw no building activity—Belmead, Shirley, South, and Tuckahoe. These streets did not experience this infill for one of two reasons: either they were cross streets and the houses were to be orientated along the main thoroughfares, or, in the case of Shirley Avenue, this short street was already entirely fully developed by 1937. Infill continued to be constructed throughout the 1950s before dropping dramatically by 1960. By then, most of the lots were occupied. Between 1960 and 1999 only 22 dwellings were built in Walnut Hill.

The composition of Walnut Hill remained highly cohesive throughout the 20th century due in large part to the generations of residents that made it their family's neighborhood. Houses were built early in the century, leaving few lots available for construction in the latter half of the century. The majority of the early dwellings built were located on Westover Avenue and were of a higher architectural standard than much of the rest of the neighborhood. Westover Avenue became a high-profile street and proximity to this address helped make the rest of the neighborhood a desirable place to reside. In 1958, a major thoroughfare was built on the east side of Petersburg that quickly became incorporated into the interstate system as I-95. By 1970, I-85 opened up running along Lieutenant Run at the northern end of Walnut Hill. The addition of these major highways has contributed to new types of uses, mostly commercial, occurring in the surrounding areas, but Walnut Hill has retained its historic appearance much as it was during the first half of the 20th century. Only minor infill has occurred in the neighborhood during the 21st century, which has accounted for only five new houses between 2000 to 2022.

Verbal Boundary Description (Describe the boundaries of the property.)

Walnut Hill Historic District is located in Petersburg, Virginia, near the geographic center of the city. It is south of Interstate 85 and west of Interstate 95. The neighborhood is bounded by North Boulevard to the northwest, Mount Vernon Street to the north, roughly bounded by Monticello Street, Fleur de Hundred Street, and Mount Vernon Street to the northeast, East Tuckahoe Street to the southeast, East Boulevard to the east, South Boulevard to the south, and Johnson Road to the west. The Walnut Hill Historic District occupies 280.49 acres. The true and correct historic boundary is shown on the attached Sketch Maps at a 1"=200' scale.

Boundary Justification (Explain why the boundaries were selected.)

The boundary contains the lands historically associated with the original Walnut Hill subdivision as platted in 1912 (Figure 1) and a portion of the lands associated with Walnut Hill Addition, as platted in 1915 (Figure 2). The original Walnut Hill development shares similar boundaries to the proposed district including South Boulevard, North Boulevard, and Johnson Road.

The portion of Walnut Hill Addition that is included in the district boundaries includes much of the northeast section. This section includes lands on the east side of Coulter Run (a branch off Lieutenant Run) from East Tuckahoe Street on the southern end to Mount Vernon Street to the north and east. 'Map No. 1' of the Walnut Hill Addition, dated 1915, shows two distinct sections that were the first planned blocks and lots by McKesson Land Corporation. The northernmost section included 15 developed blocks between the city's reservoir and East Tuckahoe Street. This section is included in the district boundaries. The southernmost section on Map No. 1 shows eight platted blocks along three northwest-southeast thoroughfares. These blocks, which contain several hundred properties, are not included in the district boundaries because they have not been surveyed, their historical associations and potential significance have not been deeply researched, and the area's integrity is not known as of this writing. Future survey of this area may lead to identification of area(s) suitable for inclusion in the Walnut Hill Historic District boundary.
